Terminalia arjuna (rubb.) Wight & Arn.

In traditional Ayurvedic medicine, fruits are used to balance the three "humors" - kapha, pitta, and vata. It has also been used for asthma, bile duct disorders, scorpion stings, and poisoning.

The bark of arjuna has been used in India for more than 3000 years, primarily as a heart remedy. An Indian physician named Vagbhata has been credited as the first to use this product for heart conditions in the seventh century A.D.

Today it is used for disorders of the heart and blood vessels (cardiovascular disease). Bark powder is effective in healing wounds. It is also used as "a water pill," and for malaria, dysentery, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), diseases of the urinary tract, and to increase sexual desire.

Cultivation: Can be grown with seeds

Zingiber officinale Roscoe

Ginger is used in clinical disorders, such as constipation, dyspepsia, diarrhea, nausea and vomiting. Its use is also recommended by the traditional medicine for cardiopathy, high blood pressure, palpitations and as a vasodilator to improve the circulation.

Ginger along with honey is useful as treatment of cough and bronchitis.

Cultivation: Can be grown with rhizomes.
